Lamps Must, However, Be Sold to Existing Electric Plants.

There was handed down in the United States Supreme Court to-day a decision in the suit of the Edison Electric Light Company and the Edison General Electric Company, appellant, sustaining the Electric Company, appellant, sustaining the proforma order of injunction against the defendant, restraining it from maxing, using or vending the incandescent electric lamps of the patent granted to Thomas A. Edison Jan.
27, 1880, and now by the plaintiffs.
The decision says, however: "The in junction order appealed from should be moodfied so as to cover only lamps made in in-

sed so as to cover only lamps made in infringement of the second claim of the patent the other claims not having been infringed according to the adjudication of the Circuit Court or of this Court.

"It should also contain a provision reserving the right to the decembant to move hereafter for the vacation, suspension or modination of the injunction, upon proce of specific instances of refusal on the jart of the complainance, or either of them, to supply the lamps of the patent upon terms reasonable under the circumstances of refusal on the jart of the complainance, or either of them, to supply the lamps of the patent upon terms reasonable under the circumstances of refusal on the jart of the complainance, or either of them, to supply the lamps of the patent upon terms reasonable under the circumstances of electricity will be introduced for lighting and as motive power for the bridge cars within two years. He would not say this morning, however, what plans had been prepared or whether any arrangements had yet been made.
